

Magnalia Dei: Biblical History in Epic Verse by Grigor Magistros (The First Literary Epic in Medieval Armenian). Critical Text, with Introduction, ... (Hebrew University Armenian Studies)

Composed by Grigor Magistros, an 11th-century Armenian princely savant and friend of the Byzantine Emperor Constantine IX Monomachus (reigned 1042-55), the Magnalia Dei is a summation of the Bible in epic verse. Written on one of the authors' visits to Constantinople, it resulted from an encounter there with a Moslem intellectual by the name of Manazi - none other than Abu Nasr al-Manazi, vizier and emissary of the Abbasid Caliphate, theologian and poet, who frequently visited Constantinople in quest of Greek scientific manuscripts. During their discussion on the Bible and the Quran, a stock Islamic argument emerged: that the Quran is superior to the Christian Scriptures on account of its beautiful, inimitable verse. The epic is Magistros' response. The Magnalia Dei is the earliest literary epic in medieval Armenian, and one of the most informative compositions within the genre of biblically inspired verse narratives in Christian literature.
